ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Ray Thomas began his career in finance shortly out of school in 1988 working for a mid-sized company then known in the financial industry as the Financial Administrator, now known in the financial industry as the Chief Financial Officer. He held that position for 11 years, and simultaneously was employed part time as the Assistant Controller for a large local video rental retail store chain until the owners sold to a national video rental retail store chain. Once the part time Assistant Controller position was eliminated due to the sale, he still continued on with his full time employment of CFO and began a small accounting firm that he operated simultaneously with his full time CFO position/career. He resigned from his primary employer as the CFO after 11 years to expand his accounting firm into a full time business that he still owns and operates to date. He has spent the past 25 years building his firm with a focus and emphasis on personal client service and quality work specializing in the “for profit” business sector. His client base ranges from small to mid-size companies and self-employed individuals.
